WEB OF SCIENCE UPDATE

Journal Citation Reports (JCR) 2005 data became available in mid-June. Be sure to clear the cache/history in your browser before going to Web of Science to access the new data.

The Web of Science/Current Contents Connect interface has also changed, and there are some new features. Author Finder is a search refinement feature that enables you to more precisely locate the author you seek by allowing you to include variant spellings, subject categories and institutions. Another new feature is improved topic searching. Now, if you enter multiple terms in the Topic field, your results will include every record containing all these words found anywhere in a Topic-related field. To look for an exact phrase, use quotation marks.

In-Cites (<http://in-cites.com>) is a free resource featuring interviews with scientists, and articles about research, journals, institutions, and nations. View selected overall and field rankings and pertinent statistics. Updated weekly is SCI-BYTES, a summary of what's new in research.

Additional free resources, including ISI Highly Cited.com, a gateway to influential scientists and scholars worldwide, are available at <http://scientific.thomson.com/free/>.

COLD SPRING HARBOR PROTOCOLS

The Library has begun an electronic subscription to Cold Spring Harbor Protocols.

This is an interactive source of new and classic research techniques searchable by keyword and subject, and presented in a step-by-step style. The coverage includes cell and molecular biology, genetics, bioinformatics, protein science, and imaging.

The Protocols can be found by clicking on the Databases link on the Library's home page.

SPOTLIGHT ON STAT!Ref

STAT!Ref, is a searchable collection of 46 current medical books. The books can be browsed or searched, at either a basic or advanced level. Advanced searching allows you to select individual or multiple titles, set the precision setting, and include related concepts or suffixes. Results are sorted by categories, such as drug information, patient information, and point of.

You can customize your view of STAT!Ref by clicking on the "Preferences" link in the upper right hand corner of the page. My STAT!Ref users have the ability to add, edit, or delete their own personal search sets.

STAT!Ref also includes a number of additional resources: Stedman's Medical Dictionary, self-assessment tools for medical students and residents, and MedCalc 3000, a medical reference and tool set that encompasses a wide array of pertinent medical formulae, clinical criteria sets and decision tree analysis tools.

STAT!Ref books can be accessed individually from the Library's E-Books link, or through the STAT!Ref link on the Library's Databases list.

CULTURAL COMPETENCE

The Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) has begun an initiative to assess education in cultural competence in the undergraduate medical school curriculum in accordance with the objectives set by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education (LCME). The AAMC has developed an instrument to measure cultural competence education for medical students called Tool for Assessing Cultural Competence Training (TACCT).

In conjunction with TACCT, the AAMC has created useful resource guides and bibliographies on cultural competence. You may link to them from the Library's Web site. Go to <http://library.aecom.yu.edu>, click on Other Information Resources, then click on Cultural Competence.

RENOVATION UPDATE

In June, the library began a one-year renovation of its main floor. Phase 1 is the makeover of the Harry H. Beren Center for Information Technology. When completed, the room will have computers as it did before. Additionally, there will be multiple types of seating for leisure and for study purposes. The room will be accessible as a 24-hour study and quiet conversation space. Below is a view of the room from the hallway. The cutouts are not serving stations for coffee, but part of the room's new look. They will be filled with colored glass, and will brighten up the Beren Center and hallway.

To keep track of the renovation's progress, check the Library's Renovation Web page at <http://library.aecom.yu.edu/library/renovation.htm>.
